

Mark Hodgson, P.Eng., MBA

Partner, Infrastructure and Capital Projects

Deloitte LLP

Mark Hodgson is the Partner who leads Deloitte's Infrastructure Advisory practice in western Canada. Mark is a proven leader in Canada's infrastructure market with 23 years' experience advising governments on the financing and procurement of some of the largest and most complex capital projects in the country. His expertise is in developing and implementing PPP, alternative service delivery and divestiture transactions.

His experience with major projects spans all infrastructure sectors including transportation, water, power, marine, solid waste, and public buildings. Mark has advised a multitude of clients resulting in successful procurements of privately financed infrastructure projects with total contract value well over $10 billion.

Mark's current assignments include financial and commercial advisor to the Port of Vancouver for the deal structure and procurement of Roberts Bank Terminal 2 project.

Mark is a civil engineer with over five years municipal engineering experience. Following a career in engineering, in 1993 he obtained an MBA in finance and strategy from McGill University.