

Ryan is a Partner in Deloitte's Strategy and Operations portfolio and Logistics & Distribution leader within its Supply Chain & Manufacturing Operations practice. He leads the development and delivery of complex operations transformations in the consumer and industrial products industry working with both shippers and carriers. His work focuses on combining leading business strategy and processes with advanced technology to create global operations that are flexible, scalable and collaborative to maximize profitability and service quality. Ryan is holds a business and information systems degree from St. Francis Xavier University and an MBA from the Queens School of Business.